22. RECOUR "L.I." Newsday

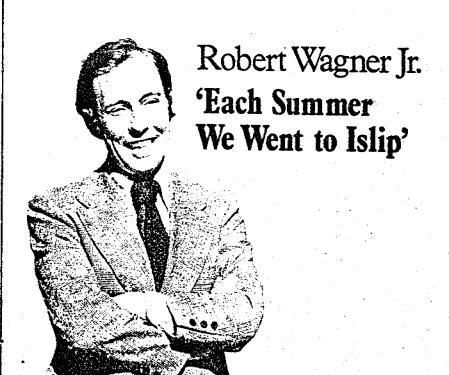

This is the mayor's home in Islip. He isn't there. Neither are pickets of Parents and Taxpayers (PAT) who staged a 24-hour vigil outside his New York City home—Gracie Mansion—from 8 p.m. Friday until 8 p.m. yesterday. Wagner wasn't there either. He was visiting friends in Islip.

Long Island Press Oct. 11 , 1964, page 3.

Even when Robert Wagner was mayor of New York, he was a part-time Long Islander. His son, Robert Wagner Jr., now a New York City councilman, recalls the weekends and summers spent become more like the city. on the South Shore.

"Each summer from the time I was 2 1/2, in 1947, we went to Islip. We finally sold that house in 1966 and then my father bought a house in Sands Point. We did all sorts of country things out in Islip. My father had a series of bosts. The first one was called the 'Dilover to Fire Island to swim.

"Long Island was a series of really small towns then. The people were still involved in fishing and some farming. growth and to see the obvious lack of Well, someone painted 'I Like Ike' in four or five gas stations when there had 'And Bob, too!"

been only a couple. Then there was a Carvel's and a McDonald's. I like Carvel's and McDonald's but I was sorry to see a place I considered the country

"Long Island was a childhood place to me and now I only go back for an 'odd weekend to see friends. And like all places that are important in our childhood which we later return to, it seems smaller, less impressive to me. The house we had - a stucco farmhouse that had rooms added on-now seems ly Dally.' I named it. And we would sail closer to the road, and the windows seem smaller than when I was a child.

"Very rarely did politics intrude on our lives in Islip. But I remember one time when my father was running for But while I was there an enormous senator in 1956 and Adlai Stevenson amount of growth took place in the was running for President. We had a area. And it disturbed me to watch the white picket fence all around the house.

planning. Suddenly, there was a trailer black paint on it. And so, instead of camp on the main street in town and repainting, we went outside and added
